

Shutting Down Wellness Together Canada Bad Mental Health & Substance Use Health Policy says CAMIMH

OTTAWA, February 22, 2024 — On February 8, 2024 the federal government announced it would stop funding and close the Wellness Together Canada (WTC) portal on April 3, 2024. WTC was originally created by the government in response to the COVID-19 health crisis. This decision puts an end to a low barrier, universal point of access to mental health and substance use health services.

The Canadian Alliance on Mental Illness and Mental Health (CAMIMH) urges the federal government and its provincial and territorial counterparts to act immediately to find a way to continue funding Wellness Together Canada. Mental health and substance use health is health and all people in Canada have a right to universal care.

The federal government stated that the emergency phase of the health crisis is over and that the mental health of Canadians has improved since the lows during the pandemic, however, the effects of the COVID-19 crisis on mental health and substance use health continue,” says Ellen Cohen, CAMIMH co-Chair. “Statistics Canada data shows that while moderate to severe symptoms of mental disorders have recovered from mid-pandemic lows, they persist at higher levels than prior to the pandemic.”

The federal government says it has engaged with the provinces and territories to ensure a transition of services. “But workforce limitations mean not all provinces and territories have the capacity to create a regional version of the services offered on this central portal, which has access to a Canada-wide workforce,” counters Cohen. “This national universal service, has supported millions of people, filled gaps and reduced burden on the mental health system. The service was gaining momentum with 4.2 million people having used the portal—thousands a day. Patients were referred to the portal by mental health professionals, family doctors, community services and more recently, the new 988 suicide crisis helpline.”

Just last month, CAMIMH released the results of its second annual mental health and substance use health report card (www.CAMIMH.ca). Once again, Canadians gave their provinces a failing grade when asked how well they thought the mental health and substance use health needs of people in their province were being met. The closure of Wellness Together Canada and these results demonstrate the federal government is out of touch with the mental health and substance use health realities of Canadians. Eliminating an effective, low barrier support such as Wellness Together Canada is a step backwards.

Health Canada states that they continue to work alongside provinces and territories to make mental health and substance use health care a full and equal part of Canada’s health care system. However, CAMIMH is not aware of such collaboration taking place, particularly in absence of a Canada Mental Health Transfer. “The closure of Wellness Together Canada is another example of the federal government failing to invest in mental health and substance use health care, which has been chronically underfunded and is, more than ever, in dire need of resources,” says Florence Budden, CAMIMH Co-Chair.

Canada's universal health care system, unlike in many other G7 countries, does not include mental health and substance use health. By ending funding to Wellness Together Canada, we are concerned that this government is reducing its funding commitment to support mental health and substance use health care.
